  - A prolonged period of hot temperatures is expected and will create a dangerous situation in which heat illnesses are possible.
- Red Flag Warning for portions of the Central Valley and Delta in Northern California through Sunday night.
  - Well above average temperatures and low humidity combined with breezy to strong north winds will bring increased fire weather concerns this weekend.
  - Daytime humidities will be low.
  - The wildland fuels are driest at the lower elevations, where there has been less precipitation over the last month. Therefore, the warning is in effect below the 1,000 foot level.

  - Record or near record heat with widespread readings from 95 to 105.
  - Values in downtown San Francisco may reach the upper 80s to lower 90s.
  - After a cool spring and early summer, temperatures will rapidly warm this weekend.
  - Sensitive populations such as the elderly, infants, and those without access to air conditioning will be susceptible to heat related illnesses.
  - The heat will likely last into early next week so the Advisory may need to be extended.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- Daytime temperatures will likely peak on Tuesday at ten or more degrees above seasonal averages in the inland valleys.
- An Excessive Heat Watch will be in effect from Tuesday, 1000 hours through Wednesday, 2000 hours for Riverside, Imperial, San Bernardino, and Inyo Counties
